COFCO Sugar recently accepted institutional research, said that in terms of supply and demand fundamentals, the southern hemisphere new crushing season is now nearing its end, and production is basically the same as last year. The crushing of sugarcane mills in the northern hemisphere is about to start. Sugar demand has a natural growth of 1%-1.5% per year. Therefore, it is generally expected that there will still be a supply and demand gap next year, and sugar prices are likely to remain high.
