VITAMIN

01

At present, some major vitamin B2 producers remain off-quote, with tight supply and reduced spot availability in the trading market. Prices remain firm at around USD 9.76-10.4/KG and are expected to stay stable to slightly stronger in the near term.

AMINO ACID

02

According to China's National Intellectual Property Administration, a patent related to high-yield L-tryptophan technology by FUFENG GROUP will be officially published on May 5, 2026. The technology introduces an R101C mutation into the GIpQ protein through genetic engineering, significantly improving L-tryptophan production efficiency and providing a new solution for amino acid strain optimization.

API

03

- Biocause Heilen Pharmaceutical announced that its dexibuprofen API has officially obtained GMP certification from Brazil's ANVISA following a successful on-site inspection conducted in late 2025.
- Meanwhile, Hvsen Biotechnology Co., Ltd. disclosed its green technology upgrade project for veterinary APIs, with a total investment of USD 24.89 million. After completion, annual tylosin capacity will increase from 2,000 MT to 4,000 MT, while tylvalosin capacity will expand from 600 MT to 2,760 MT, with flexible production capability for monensin, salinomycin, and colistin sulfate based on market demand.

FOOD ADDITIVE

04

Recently, Bloomage Biotechnology's self-developed nutritional ingredient BLOOMSAS™ (salidroside) successfully obtained FDA Self-GRAS certification in the United States. The ingredient is positioned for sports nutrition, emotional wellness, sleep support, and high-altitude protection applications. With this certification, it can now be legally used in conventional foods such as functional beverages and protein powders in the U.S. market, marking another international breakthrough for innovative Chinese functional ingredients.
